Our Greatest Sources of Knowledge

The white, blinding sun glared off of the now-closed visor as, with a shout, both knights drove their spurs into the horses' flanks. Simultaneously, the animals' muscles contracted. Building speed, the men looked encased in mirror, not steel, as the sun glinted and sparkled off the polished metal in a dazzling display. The air was alive with the "neighs" of beasts and the shouts of the men; the air shook and vibrated in a sound that was felt. It wrapped one up in a cocoon of chaos while time slowed. The lances lowered as they closed and...

Whether like the knights above, or princesses, pick up trucks, fiction, or fact, there's a book for you. A story so engrossing that time stops as you age with the characters of your adventure. Gain as they gain, lose as they lose, learn as they learn. This is what gives us that love of literature. To help develop this, HHCS has various programs throughout the year, one being the annual Book Fair which will start on the 17th and end on grandparents day, the 21st of October. The Book Fair is an opportunity for students to buy books on a variety of subjects, or, if they can, to have their grandparents pay for them. After all, the Book Fair culminates on Grandparents Day.

Grandparents Day itself is a much-enjoyed annual program to honor those that came before us, often way before us. No matter how much more, however, we love them the same, and that is the goal of Grandparents Day, to show our love for them. There will be many skits and songs all centered on our honored guests. Every grandparent and kid combo will get their pictures taken, so please don't forget dentures or your touch-of-color hair products.

Whether you want a book on kites, or just come to eat cookies at the Grandparents Day program, this coming week is full of elementary activities. So don't miss out on the great opportunities as they only come once a year.
